

Today, you will repeat what you learned last lesson.

1. Echo read an extract of chapter 5 with me

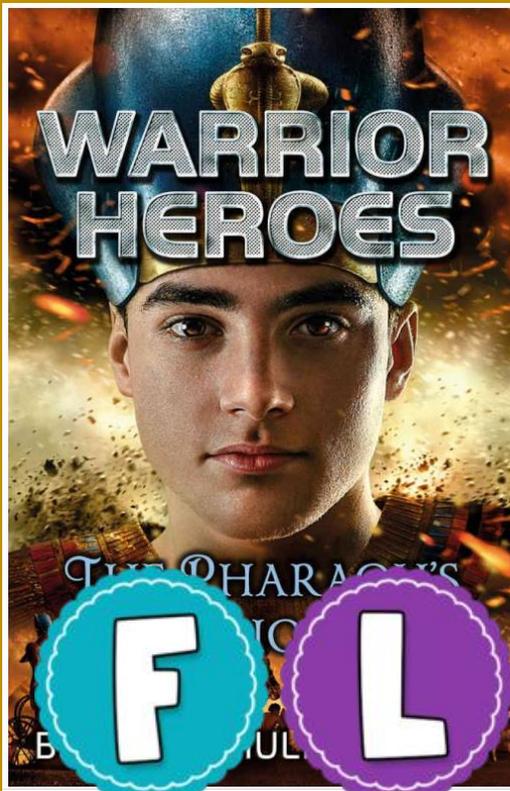

2. Practise your fluency for a selected part of the chapter then perform.

3. Use your knowledge of the chapter to make inferences.

1. Listen to me read.

Remember, to follow the text with your finger as I read and keep up.

F

L

U

E

N

C

Y

1. Listen to me read.

Arthur gasped when the blindfold was removed.

He had been in complete darkness from the moment that a sack had been pulled over his head. There had been no warning. No sounds of a scuffle. Somehow the kidnappers had floated past the temple guard sentries undetected. In fact the only voices Arthur could remember were those of Finn and Nefi calling out as they ran over from the campfire. When he and Thami cried out for help they were swiftly knocked unconscious, and by the time they came round they were each slung across the back of a horse, bound and blindfolded.

After several uncomfortable hours Arthur was dragged down off his horse and allowed to lie on a carpeted floor for a while, before being hauled to his feet again. He was marched up a long, steep flight of steps. He heard doors opening and closing, felt the ground beneath his feet become smoother, the air cooler and then warmer again, and then, with no warning at all, the blindfold was removed.

Arthur gasped when the blindfold was removed.

He had been in complete darkness from the moment that a sack had been pulled over his head. There had been no warning. No sounds of a scuffle. Somehow the kidnappers had floated past the temple guard sentries undetected. In fact the only voices Arthur could remember were those of Finn and Nefi calling out as they ran over from the campfire. When he and Thami cried out for help they were swiftly knocked unconscious, and by the time they came round they were each slung across the back of a horse, bound and blindfolded.

After several uncomfortable hours Arthur was dragged down off his horse and allowed to lie on a carpeted floor for a while, before being hauled to his feet again. He was marched up a long, steep flight of steps. He heard doors opening and closing, felt the ground beneath his feet become smoother, the air cooler and then warmer again, and then, with no warning at all, the blindfold was removed.

ECHO!

2. Practise your fluency for a selected part of the chapter then perform.

x3

Practise and think about...

Punctuation

When you read the passage today, pay close attention to the punctuation.

Period: Pause and take a breath.

Exclamation: Voice goes up.

Question: Voice goes up.

Comma: Slow down, take a little breath.

Arthur gasped when the blindfold was removed.

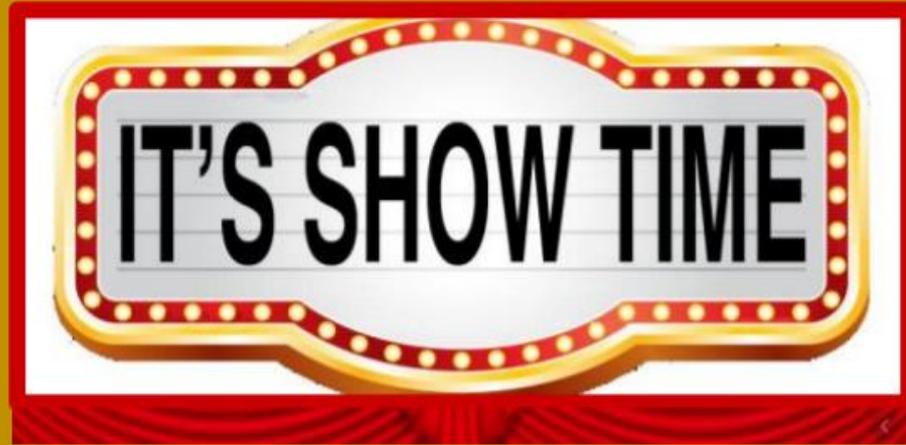

He had been in complete darkness from the moment that a sack had been pulled over his head. There had been no warning. No sounds of a scuffle. Somehow the kidnappers had floated past the temple guard sentries undetected. In fact the only voices Arthur could remember were those of Finn and Nefi calling out as they ran over from the campfire. When he and Thami cried out for help they were swiftly knocked unconscious, and by the time they came round they were each slung across the back of a horse, bound and blindfolded.

After several uncomfortable hours Arthur was dragged down off his horse and allowed to lie on a carpeted floor for a while, before being hauled to his feet again. He was marched up a long, steep flight of steps. He heard doors opening and closing, felt the ground beneath his feet become smoother, the air cooler and then warmer again, and then, with no warning at all, the blindfold was removed.

With me

2. Practise your fluency for a selected part of the chapter then perform.

It's time to perform!
Perform the extract to someone or to the class.
Remember to use the punctuation to help you control your pace.

3. Use your knowledge of the chapter to make inferences.

Arthur gasped when the blindfold was removed.

He had been in complete darkness from the moment that a sack had been pulled over his head. There had been no warning. No sounds of a scuffle. Somehow the kidnappers had floated past the temple guard sentries undetected. In fact the only voices Arthur could remember were those of Finn and Nefi calling out as they ran over from the campfire. When he and Thami cried out for help they were swiftly knocked unconscious, and by the time they came round they were each slung across the back of a horse, bound and blindfolded.

After several uncomfortable hours Arthur was dragged down off his horse and allowed to lie on a carpeted floor for a while, before being hauled to his feet again. He was marched up a long, steep flight of steps. He heard doors opening and closing, felt the ground beneath his feet become smoother, the air cooler and then warmer again, and then, with no warning at all, the blindfold was removed.

What did you learn last lesson?

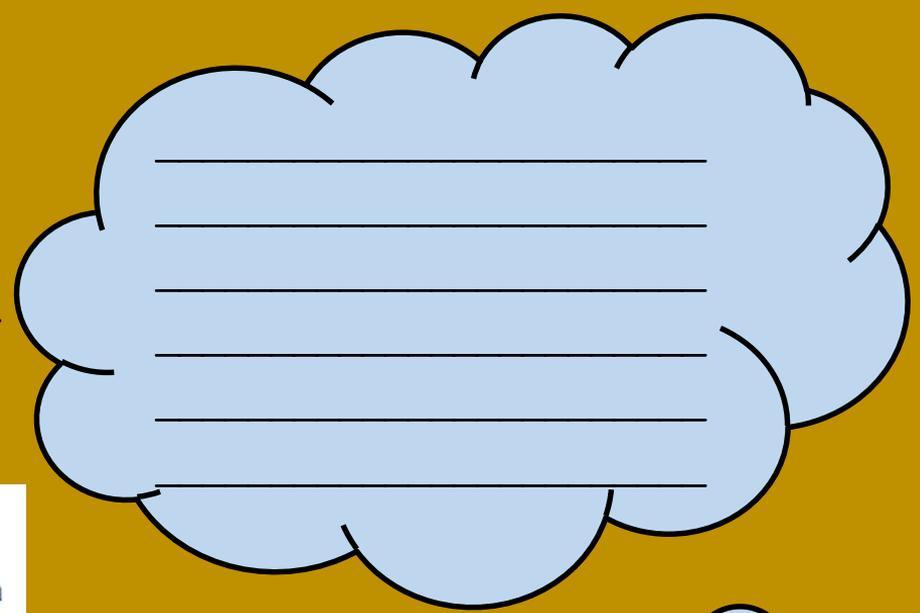

3. Use your knowledge of the chapter to make inferences.

*What is Arthur thinking at this point in the chapter?
Underline the evidence.*

Arthur gasped when the blindfold was removed.

He had been in complete darkness from the moment that a sack had been pulled over his head. There had been no warning. No sounds of a scuffle. Somehow the kidnappers had floated past the temple guard sentries undetected. In fact the only voices Arthur could remember were those of Finn and Nefi calling out as they ran over from the campfire. When he and Thami cried out for help they were swiftly knocked unconscious, and by the time they came round they were each slung across the back of a horse, bound and blindfolded.

After several uncomfortable hours Arthur was dragged down off his horse and allowed to lie on a carpeted floor for a while, before being hauled to his feet again. He was marched up a long, steep flight of steps. He heard doors opening and closing, felt the ground beneath his feet become smoother, the air cooler and then warmer again, and then, with no warning at all, the blindfold was removed.

IT'S YOUR TURN

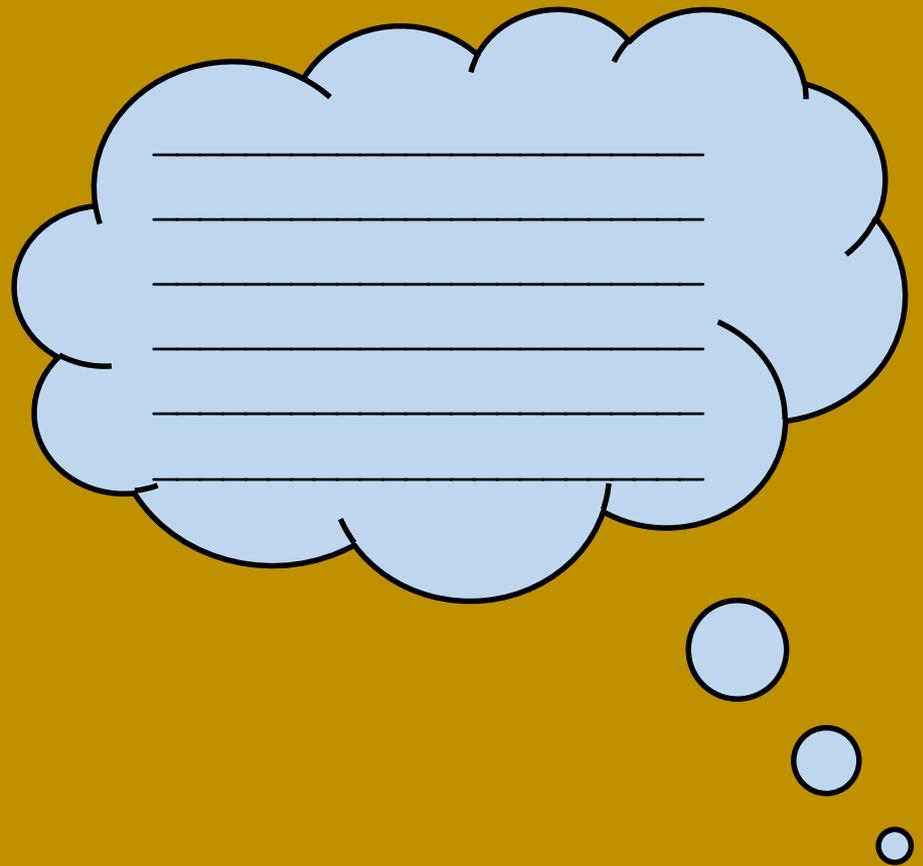

RESPOND

L.O. I am learning to make inferences.

 Share and discuss your responses with me.

Can you improve your answer?

L.O. I am learning to make inferences.

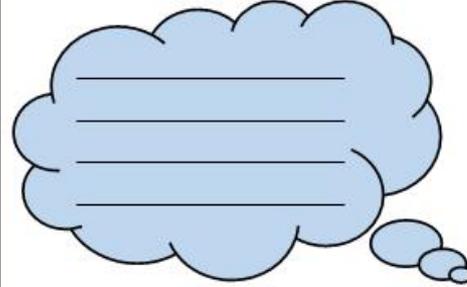

Complete the next sheet independently.

L.O. I am learning to make inferences.

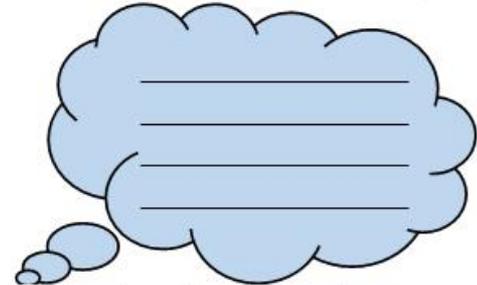

Use the thought bubble to make an inference about how Arthur is feeling at this point in the chapter.

Underline the evidence that makes you think this.

Arthur was alarmed to note that Thami's mood had deteriorated badly. Gone was the mask of regal confidence and authority he had displayed in front of the general, and the prince now lay sprawled in a corner, his face a picture of despair.

"This isn't over yet," said Arthur carefully, "and it's not your fault in any case."

"I haven't finished. There were two other youths at the camp when we took you. A boy and a girl. I left a man behind to see what happened. He reports that the boy and the girl ran away from the camp. He tracked them because they weren't heading for Thebes. They were following us..."