

The ring of sarsens surrounded a horse-shoe of five trilithons which had lintels on top and fitted together snugly for strength. There are only six remaining lintels. Experts say that if it was ever completed the lintels would have formed a complete circle of stone.