

The Blitz

It was a (adjective) day. There were (adjective) planes flying above. I could hear the (adjective) bombs exploding in the distance. I held my mother's and sister's hands (adverb) and ran to the nearest shelter (adverb). I looked around the shelter and could see (continue sentence). The bombing had stopped and we returned to the streets. The streets looked (adjective). I felt (continue sentence). All the buildings I knew had been destroyed.

