

Using semicolons to demarcate independent clauses Quiz

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

Many children spend hours on computer games; this is not good for their eyesight.

Many children; spend hours on computer games this is not good for their eyesight.

Many children spend hours on computer games this is not good; for their eyesight.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

Many children spend hours on computer games; this is not good for their eyesight.

Many children; spend hours on computer games this is not good for their eyesight.

Many children spend hours on computer games this is not good; for their eyesight.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

I've been; looking everywhere for my keys I wish I didn't leave them in random places.

I've been looking everywhere for; my keys I wish I didn't leave them in random places.

I've been looking everywhere for my keys; I wish I didn't leave them in random places.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

I've been; looking everywhere for my keys I wish I didn't leave them in random places.

I've been looking everywhere for; my keys I wish I didn't leave them in random places.

I've been looking everywhere for my keys; I wish I didn't leave them in random places.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

Many ancient civilisations; built temples this was a sacred place to bury the dead.

Many ancient civilisations built temples; this was a sacred place to bury the dead.

Many ancient civilisations built temples this was a sacred place; to bury the dead.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

Many ancient civilisations; built temples this was a sacred place to bury the dead.

Many ancient civilisations built temples; this was a sacred place to bury the dead.

Many ancient civilisations built temples this was a sacred place; to bury the dead.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

He has always loved playing tennis; it's football that he doesn't enjoy.

He has always loved playing tennis it's football; that he doesn't enjoy.

He has always; loved playing tennis it's football that he doesn't enjoy.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

He has always loved playing tennis; it's football that he doesn't enjoy.

He has always loved playing tennis it's football; that he doesn't enjoy.

He has always; loved playing tennis it's football that he doesn't enjoy.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

We arrived at our hotel at 11am shortly after unpacking; we went swimming.

We arrived at our hotel at 11am; shortly after unpacking we went swimming.

We arrived at our hotel at; 11am shortly after unpacking we went swimming.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

We arrived at our hotel at 11am shortly after unpacking; we went swimming.

We arrived at our hotel at 11am; shortly after unpacking we went swimming.

We arrived at our hotel at; 11am shortly after unpacking we went swimming.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

The witch lives in a small cottage the dragon; lives in a cave.

The witch; lives in a small cottage the dragon lives in a cave.

The witch lives in a small cottage; the dragon lives in a cave.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

The witch lives in a small cottage the dragon; lives in a cave.

The witch; lives in a small cottage the dragon lives in a cave.

The witch lives in a small cottage; the dragon lives in a cave.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

I enjoyed my breakfast in the café afterwards; I went to the shops.

I enjoyed my breakfast in the café; afterwards I went to the shops.

I enjoyed my breakfast; in the café afterwards I went to the shops.

Which sentence correctly uses a semicolon to demarcate an independent clause?

I enjoyed my breakfast in the café afterwards; I went to the shops.

I enjoyed my breakfast in the café; afterwards I went to the shops.

I enjoyed my breakfast; in the café afterwards I went to the shops.

THE END