

"I have no cakes," the rabbit replied.

"I just have a bunch of clover."

The Highway Rat gave a scornful look but he ordered, "Hand it over."

"We have no sweets," the ants replied.

"We just have this nice green leaf."

"Oh, no, you don't – not any more,"
declared the highway thief.

"I have no buns," the squirrel replied.

"I just have a sack of nuts."

The robber snatched the sack and snarled,

"I'll have no ifs or buts!"

"I have no pizza," the fox replied.

"I just have this juicy berry."

The Highway Rat snatched the red delight,

"I'll take it," he cried. "it'll make me merry!"

Remember: the last word in the second and last line need to rhyme!
