Dear Diary,

I have had the most extraordinary day. You will not believe what happened to me.

First, I waited excitedly outside the tomb door, just waiting for the door to open. When it did, I felt like a real explorer.

Quickly, I walked into the tomb, ready to face whatever came. The door slammed shut behind me but I had my bright lamp to guide me. Cautiously, I went up some stairs and searched for the way to the treasure. I couldn't believe my eyes. There were two different paths in front of me and I didn't know which way I was meant to go. A loud noise came from behind me and I felt a cold breeze across my face. I darted down the closest corridor to get away.

I found myself in a huge room, covered in empty doorways. Getting hold of my book, I looked for clues and there it was. I needed to go to the statue. It was so frustrating! I didn't know how to get the statue to move. Then, as quick as a flash, it slapped me. Unbelievable! But it helped me to see the coin slot. I grabbed my knife and wriggled it around until finally the statue went up. I saw the tunnel and was excited. Crouching down, I crawled through surrounded by darkness. My teeth chattered and my skin tingled. After what felt like hours, I came out into a large corridor and I noticed a light switch. How strange! I flicked it on and off so many times. I loved it. Then, I saw it. The treasure I had been searching for. I ran over and grabbed hold of it. As I admired it, I bumped into a handle. Hmm, what could that be? Well, believe it or not, when I turned the handle a door opened. Inside was so much golden treasure. As soon as I let the handle go, the door slammed shut. Annoyed, I turned the handle again and stretched as far as I could to reach the new treasure.

Next, hair stood up on the back of my neck and I turned around. I could not believe what I was seeing. There was a real life mummy taking my treasure! I snatched my treasure and ran. Unfortunately, I ran straight into an even bigger mummy. It was not my day! Luckily, I pushed it over and got away. The scratching behind me told me that the baby mummy was following me but I knew I was faster. BANG! Huge blocks fell from the ceiling and I jumped like a ninja over some and slid under others. Then, I accidentally tripped and fell, dropping my treasure. That annoying mummy had hold of my treasure again! Angrily, I jumped up and snatched it back. I ran! Suddenly, I heard a buzzing sound. What was it? I was so scared I couldn't look behind me. But whatever the buzzing creatures were they ate my top...my favourite top. I was so annoyed!

In the next moment, I ran out of path. There in front of me was a sheer drop into molten lava. I was terrified!

The scratching and moaning was back. The mummy was coming fast. Maybe both of them. I thought I was never going to escape. Then, I remembered...my book.

Quickly, I searched through the pages. They tore but I didn't care. I was dumbstruck! It was telling me to step off into empty space! I heard the loud moaning again. I made my decision and threw the book over my shoulder.

Butterflies were jumping around in my tummy as I took a careful step closer to the edge. Closing my eyes, I stepped off. I fell! I had never screamed so loud in my life!

Huge steps suddenly lifted and I was safe. I couldn't believe my eyes! There ahead was a stall selling souvenirs. Slowly, I walked across the bridge when I heard them. I turned around and saw them! I ran again!

The mummies were getting close. How could these monsters be so fast. I ran as fast as I could. Finally I saw my escape, the train was just ahead.

I jumped in, ecstatic that I was finally safe from those strange monsters and I had my treasure!

Finally, I got off of the train, ripped the wrapper off and had a huge bite from my chocolate treasure. I had done it. I loved getting the photograph to remind myself about this day!
